WELCOME TO SEILI

In the middle of the archipelago, some 15 nautical miles south from Turku and along the sailing route to Åland, you find the island of Seili with a unique and diverse history that spans for over 400 years.

The island's unique history begins in 1619, when by order of King Gustav II Adolf of Sweden, a leper colony and hospital was established on the island. As leprosy began to disappear from Finland during the 18th century, a mental asylum was built on the main island where mentally ill persons were treated all until 1962.

At its peak, the hospital was the largest in Finland and after the closing in 1962, the buildings were taken over by the University of Turku and the Archipelago Research Institute began operating in 1964, focusing on studies of the marine ecosystems of the Archipelago Sea and the entire Baltic Sea area.

Along with the university's science and marine research work taking place, Seili is a very popular destination for visitors, offering a wide range of hospitality services as; cafe-restaurant, accommodation, guided tours, a guest harbour and good connections from the mainland during the season.
